Leap from Windows to Escape Flames

22 GIRLS KILLED IN FIRE

BROOKLYN FACTORY WORKERS PERISH IN FIRE HORROR

BROOKLYN, Nov. 6.—Twenty-two women and girls are reported to have been killed today in a fire that swept the six-story building occupied by the Diamond Candy Company and other manufactories at No. 385 Sixth street, Brooklyn.

Ambulances from eight hospitals carried 68 persons to hospitals. The fire started in the candy company quarters on the third floor and spread rapidly. Within five minutes the building, said to have housed more than 1,000 workers, was in flames.

Women and girls began to jump from windows and fire escapes long before the firemen arrived. Bodies caught on fire escapes were scorched and burned beyond recognition.

Fire engines were called from all parts of Brooklyn, but the force was unable to cope with the flames for a time. Meanwhile reports that the death list would be larger than first reports caused extra ambulances to be summoned.

Numerous operators of the Essex Shirt Company on the fourth and fifth floors are reported dead.

Eighteen girls, burned or injured by leaps to the street, were hurried to hospitals within the first ten minutes.

Scores of others rushed to the top floor of the wooden building and leaped to the roof of an adjoining building occupied by L. Goldberg & Co. Others tried to rush down the staircases of the burning building, were trapped between floors and are said to have perished. The building is an old one, without elevators. The blaze cut off all escape to the street by the halls. Girls rushed up the stairs.

It was then that the tragedy assumed enormous proportions. Some of the girls screamed, others jumped. Many hung on the fire escapes. After the first flame appeared the ancient structure caved in. The entire list of dead will not be known until the ruins are examined.

NISH CAPTURED, RAILWAY OPEN TO TURKEY

SOFIA, via Amsterdam and London, Nov. 6.—Bulgarians have captured Nish, the city to which the Serbian government was moved from Belgrade.

Official announcement of the capture of the Serbian city was made today by the Bulgarian War Office.

The fall of Nish gives the Germans a clear railway route from Berlin to Constantinople.

Troops and ammunition trains will probably be rolling through from Germany to Turkey within a few days.

The statement of the Bulgarian War Office follows:

"A Bulgarian division has entered Nish."

Nish fell before the attacks of the first Bulgarian army under General Boyadjieff.

BIG GUNS SMASH FORTS.

After the forts defending the city on the north were smashed to ruins by the big guns of the Bulgars, the troops made their victorious entry into the city.

The capture of Nish is one of the most important victories the Bulgarians have achieved in their campaign in Serbia. The city was strongly fortified and held by a strong force of Serbians.

Practically all the strongholds of the Serbs in northern Serbia are now in the hands of the Germans, the Austro-Hungarians and the Bulgarians.

SERBS DRIVEN TO MOUNTAINS.

The Serbians are retreating to the mountains, hammered mercilessly by the Austro-German and Bulgarian armies.

Bloody street fighting took place in Nish after the Bulgarians entered.

Nish is on the main line of the Orient railway and is 75 miles from where the line to Sofia and Constantinople branches off from the line which runs southward from Belgrade to Salonica. Nish is 120 miles southeast of Belgrade and 50 miles from the Bulgarian border.

ATHENS DISPATCH SAY ZAIMIS MAY REMAIN PREMIER

LONDON, Nov. 6.—Conflicting reports have been received from Athens relative to the status of the present political situation. A Reuter dispatch from Athens today states that Premier Zaimis has consented to form a new cabinet. This dispatch follows:

"Premier Zaimis has consented to reconstruct the Greek government. The Chamber of Deputies is to be dissolved. Most of the old ministers will be retained, but new men are expected to be selected for the portfolios of Public Worship and Justice.

Almost simultaneously, another dispatch was received from the American legation at Paris, saying that King Constantine had accepted the resignation of Zaimis, and that the King had commissioned Venizelos to form a new cabinet.

A certain situation has arisen. Leaders of the pro-ally party openly predict that, unless Greece goes to war to satisfy the martial spirit of the people, a revolution may take place.

According to the Paris dispatch, King Constantine has decided to solve the problem by putting it up to the people. When a new Chamber is formed, the people will be able to say with their votes whether they want to go to war on one side or the other, or whether they want a continuance of neutrality.

Tremendous pressure has been exerted upon the Greek King by England, France, Russia and Italy to consent to the formation of a new government that will favor the active cause of Greece into the war on the side of the allies. Although there has been a strong demand for the selection of former Premier Venizelos as the next Premier, King Constantine has steadfastly opposed this.

Excitement runs high in Athens. Riots take place in front of parliament building, following the conferences between the King and the leaders of the various political parties.

At the close of the Suffolk Grand Jury session, George P. Brophy, foreman, was presented with an order for two chairs, as a wedding present, by his associates. On November 16 he will be married to Miss Marion Nearing of Arlington.

POISONED HIMSELF AT 40!

Death by slow poison is killing many a man, young and old, daily. Don't make the fatal mistake of failing to understand the warnings of kidney trouble.

When your kidneys begin to lag in throwing off natural poisons that accumulate in your body, the first warnings come in little twinges, or stiffness across your back and hips. Urination may be too frequent; you may feel "all right" in the morning when you should feel your best.

The best known remedy for these troubles is GOLD MEDAL Haarlem Oil Capsules. This remedy has stood the test for more than 200 years, since it was first produced in the ancient laboratories in Haarlem, Holland. It goes right to the kidneys and bladder and gives relief at once, or your money will be refunded. GOLD MEDAL Haarlem Oil Capsules are imported from Holland, and can be had at any drug store. Price 25c, 50c and $1.00. Accept no substitute.

For Backache

At the first "pain in the back" get from your druggist about five ounces of rheumasalts. Take two teaspoonfuls in one-half glass of water before breakfast each morning and in a few days your back will be strong and limber, because your kidneys are working right.

Rheumasalts is a wonderful, effervescent lithia drink, which helps the weakened kidneys and liver and cleans out the stomach of toxins and poisons and leaves the intestinal canal clean and sweet. It is an absolutely harmless uric acid solvent as well as a saline laxative, acts quickly without griping or nausea.—Advertisement.

FRENCH REPULSE ATTACKS BY GERMANS

By CHARLES P. BERTELLI,
Special Correspondent of the International News Service.

PARIS, Nov. 6.—Renewing their offensive in Champagne, the Germans directed a series of furious night attacks against the trench works in the sector of LaCourtine, says the French War Office in an official communique today.

All the attacks were repulsed. Between the Argonne Forest and the Meuse, north of Verdun, there was fighting with mines. The following is the text of the official report:

"In the Champagne a new German attack was repeated during the night against our trenches and entanglements of LaCourtine. This attack was repulsed with the loss of the attacking hand grenades were used by both sides.

"Between the Argonne and the Meuse an explosion of our mines damaged German works very considerably in the region of Malancourt. The night was comparatively calm on the balance of the front."

The following supplemental report dealing with the British forces was issued:

Allied aviators engaged German aeroplanes, and during the combat one of the enemy aircraft was shot down within the German lines. On November 1 there have been considerable mining operations by both sides.

ALLIES DEFEAT THE BULGARS, FERDINAND GOING TO THE FRONT

LONDON, Nov. 6.—The Serbians, aided by a few detachments of allied troops, have dealt the Bulgarians a terrific blow which in the last days of 1914 nearly obliterated the Austrain invading army.

News of the important victory for the Anglo-French and Serbian troops over the Bulgarians in southern Serbia was officially announced today by the Serbian legation. The announcement follows:

"Allies have won victory over Bulgarians at Ivuor. The Bulgarians were defeated. Ivuor is ten miles south of Veles and seven miles west of Nish-Salonica railway."

It is reported from Bucharest that King Ferdinand has gone to the Nish front and that the King and Emperor William of Germany, confident that their armies will ultimately crush Serbia, are making preparations to hold a triumphal meeting upon the Balkan battle field.

But while the Anglo-French and Serb forces have achieved important successes in Serbia of late month, the offensive movement of the Bulgarians and Germans and in northern Serbia the Austro-German and Bulgarian line is being drawn closer and closer about the last remnant line.

The Bulgarians have evacuated the Nish bank of the Morava River and are in full retreat to Velea. The victorious forces of King Peter already have reoccupied Nish, and Gradsko and are continuing the pursuit.

The total Bulgarian losses in Serbia are estimated at 8,000.

Further north, however, the Austro-Germans are pursuing their advance and that fork of the Morava-Danube-Berlin reports progress along the whole line with the capture of 2,700 Serbians.

A new movement has been started to call out the martial spirit of the Montenegro, if they should seek to overthrow the present King and gun an attack on the Montenegrins east of Trebinje in Herzegovina, thus threatening the Austrians in the west as well as from the north.

NISH HELD OUT ONLY THREE DAYS, SAYS BERLIN REPORT

BERLIN, Nov. 6.—The capture of Nish, the war capital of Serbia, by General Boyadieff's Bulgarian army after three days of violent fighting, was officially announced by the German War Office today. This was a notable victory for the Teutonic allies in the Balkins.

The capture of 2,000 more Serbians is also announced. It is also announced that the French penetrated a German trench north of Massiges, in the Champagne region, but that they were driven back by the Germans.

Attempts of the Russians to break the German lines west of Dunaberg (Divinsk), Russia, failed.

In fighting on the Stripa River the Austro-German forces captured fifty Russians, says the report.

Near Kevarin, Russia, the Germans have captured Kevarin. More than 2,000 Russians have captured Kralljevo. East of Kralljevo the Serbs are being pursued.

The Germans have crossed the Zuzgovica-Ibar section, reaching Studal. The enemy has been pursued beyond Chevaskirica in the Morava valley.

"General Boyadieff's army defeated the Serbians near Lukovo and near Kurshumlia. More than 500 prisoners and six guns were captured.

"After three days' hard fighting the Bulgarians have captured Nish. Three hundred and fifty prisoners and two cannon were captured.

(Kralljevo lies on the railway that runs from Ushitze to Nish. It is twenty miles southeast of Cacak.)

"Western theatre—North of Massiges French troops that had been able to penetrate part of a new German trench were thrown out with the use of hand-grenades.

"Eastern theatre—Russian attempts to break through the German positions to the Duenburg (Divinsk) failed.

"The army of General von Linsengen has gained more Russian positions northeast of Rucka. The Russians were thrown back into their old positions on the east bank of the Stripa. In engagements which have just ended fifty Russian officers and 6,000 men were captured."

The Boston American Announces Campaign of Christmas Happiness

The Boston AMERICAN today announces for its readers its annual CAMPAIGN OF HAPPINESS—the collection of funds for Christmas dinners for the needy.

The Christmas season, with good cheer for those who are able to buy, is now only a few weeks away, and every day is needed to make the work a big success.

Last year the AMERICAN conducted its Christmas dinner campaign with the assistance of its readers, the Mayor, the influential and the charitably inclined, under the name of the "Give-a-Basket Fund." Over 7,000 needy families were provided with a good Christmas dinner by this fund. This work was declared by those who know best to be the most beneficient thing of its kind ever attempted. So far as the committee was able to learn, not a single needy family went without a substantial Christmas dinner on Christmas, 1914.

If this great result could be accomplished last year at a time when business was at a much lower ebb than it has been for some years, it is believed that a still larger sum and a greater work can be accomplished this year, when business everywhere is on the up-grade, and in some lines was never better.

The Boston AMERICAN Christmas Basket Fund is now a Boston institution. Bostonians are a generous people, and the joy of their giving is not confined to any season of the year, so that a great total contribution is assured.

Plans are being made for the solicitation and collection of funds for this Christmas Basket Dinner. One hundred per cent. of every contribution will go toward the purchase of these baskets. The AMERICAN assumes all the expense of collection, and all the other work connected with the campaigning.

From day to day the plans and results will be given in the AMERICAN. The assistance of every reader is needed. Watch the AMERICAN every day for the progress of the CAMPAIGN of HAPPINESS.

INDICT CABMAN IN SLAYING OF WOMAN

FITZGERALD AND CURLEY BURY HATCHET

The Suffolk County Grand Jury returned indictments today against Theodore Seaman, a West End cabman, for the murder of Johanna Donovan at the St. James Hotel, West End, a few weeks ago.

Alexander Borstel, the Dorchester boy who was accused of setting tenement house fires, was indicted for arson in one count. He was arraigned before Judge Hitchcock and pleaded not guilty. Borstel was arrested after the fourth three-decker apartment house fires that held all Dorchester in terror for several months.

Mary J. Train was indicted for arson.

Beth A. Burlingame was indicted for larceny of various sums of money by means of checks.

There were thirty-two true bills and eight no bills returned by the Grand Jury.

Three indictments were returned against Dr. J. Washington Hill, a Columbus avenue physician, Julius Simon, a druggist on Columbus avenue, and his clerk, for violation of the drug laws and for criminal conspiracy in connection with furnishing drugs to persons known to the physician as habitual users. The indictments were secures on complaint of officers of the Watch and Ward Society.

Assistant District Attorney McIsaacs, who was assigned to the case, said today:

"This is an awful condition of affairs and I am glad that an opportunity is at hand for us to get at the heart of this death dealing traffic in poisons. It has got to stop."

"In July," said J. Frank Chase, secretary of the Watch and Ward Society, later, "the supply of dope had so tightened up as to give hope that the worst was over in this vice in Boston. But practically all of some physicians to issue prescriptions to habitual users, who in turn go out and peddle the stuff. Now conditions things up again. It is a practice that must be stopped or the very bad conditions of a few years ago will come back again.

"It is true that the physicians claimed to be acting in good faith, through ignorance, generally, and attempting to save men by what they call the reduction method, but modern science makes this method only a farce. With the craving for the drug, it is as sensible to give a drunkard a ten-gallon jug of whiskey and tell him to drink a swallow less each time as it is to give an habitual user fifty grains and advise him to take a little less each injection."

That Mayor Curley and former Mayor Fitzgerald have really buried the hatchet and will henceforth be in accord on political matters is shown by an announcement on Page 4 of the Sunday Herald. Fitzgerald's own paper, under the heading "Political and Other Views." The announcement reads:

"The Republic has been in constant disagreement with His Honor at City Hall the past two years. It will not be so in the future. It will be our aim to help the administration in every way that we can to the end that unity of purpose may pervade all those engaged in the work of welfare along constructive lines."

This is the first official verification that the Curley-Fitzgerald fight had been called off. Many persons were of the opinion when Curley and Fitzgerald introduced each other in turn at the recent Democratic ratification meeting in Tremont Temple that only a temporary truce had been declared.

For two years prior to the recent election Mayor Curley refused to accept a seat on the same platform with Fitzgerald, or even to address any meeting at which the former Mayor was a speaker.

War Exports Worth Million a Day

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—Exports of war materials from the United States now average more than $1,000,000 a day, according to a statement by the Syrian trade department of the National City Bank. An interesting feature of the report of exports for the week ended October 23 is that while not a dollar's worth was sent to Germany there were enormous increases in the shipments to Denmark, Sweden and other Scandinavian ports. The inference is that a large part of these exports eventually will find their way into Germany.

Stork Bars Empress at Jap Coronation

TOKIO, Nov. 6.—Yoshihito, Emperor of Japan and 122nd head of the Japanese imperial house after the first Emperor Jimmu, has left Tokio for Kioto to formerly accede to the throne. He was to have been accompanied by Empress Sadako, but the nearness of the period when Her Majesty is expected to give birth to another heir prevented her from participating in the ceremonies.

American's Property Raided by Villa

WASHINGTON, Nov. 6.—General Villa has begun wholesale raids on property owned by Americans in Mexico, and is levying heavy cash tributes on all American-owned corporations in his territory, General Bliss reported to the State Department today.

Washington also confirmed the report that Villa had ordered the release of Drs. R. H. Thigpen and James Miller Watson, and Miss Lucy Wren, chauffeurs, the four Americans whom Villa had imprisoned at Chihuahua, later admitted to Funston that he had obtained the four believing they were Germans. Villa also has seized cattle from the Cananea Copper Company and $25,000 in gold and ten tons of flour. He also served notice on the Montezuma Copper Company and the Elinger Mining Company that if each does not pay him $25,000 he will confiscate their property. All of the companies are owned by Americans.

From the Cananea Cattle Company, another American concern, he has demanded 35,000 cattle, its entire herd.

According to a neighbor the girl was despondent over family troubles and took poison while alone in the house yesterday afternoon. She then ran from the building to the home of a neighbor, where she told a friend of what she had done. When asked why she took the poison Miss Bailey replied: "I have nothing to live for." She was formerly a nurse in the Long Island Hospital.

WIFE DECLARES NAVAL HERO CHOKED HER

WASHINGTON, Nov. 6.—Mrs. Mary Cronan, divorced wife of Lieutenant-Commander William T. Cronan, was the chief witness at today's hearing of her suit to recover $7,000 in conformity with an alleged agreement between herself and former husband to pay her for procuring a divorce.

Just before the conclusion of the proceedings, Judge Stafford, presiding, said that he might instruct the jury to find for the defendant.

"I believe there is a question of fact to be determined by the jury," said Justice Stafford. "The question hinges on whether this contract was based on an illegal consideration. If it was based in part on the plaintiff getting a divorce it cannot be enforced, and I shall so instruct the jury."

Mrs. Cronan testified that her husband pleaded with her to allow him to get a divorce. Aroused by a violent ringing of the doorbell in her New York apartment late one night she asked who was there, when her husband answered, "Billy; let me in."

"He went direct to my room and told me that he wanted me to get a divorce from him. He said then that he did not love me, had never loved me, and admitted that he was in love with another woman. I told him that I would not get a divorce.

"He went away, but returned later and again pleaded with me, saying, 'I leave my life's happiness in your hands. Are you going to stand between two loving hearts?'

"I asked, 'What about my loving heart?'

"At a third call he asked me to forgive him, said he had not treated me right, and as I was about to go to sleep in his arms I awoke and found him trying to choke me. We had a terrible scene before he left, and we did not see each other again until this proceeding."

The witness said that she was born in Syracuse in 1872, but at 14 came to New York to complete her education. She entered the theatrical work at 17 and played in companies with Henry Miller, Henry Dixey, William Gillette and Maude Adams.

WILSON TO FIGHT PREPAREDNESS TO VICTORY

By JOHN EDWIN NEVIN.
Special Correspondent of the International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 6.—Back in the White House, President Wilson today took stock of the controversy with Colonel William Jennings Bryan, growing out of his Manhattan Club speech on preparedness.

The President already has analyzed the attack on his plan of increasing the army and navy. And the men who should know his mind say he has received the Bryan statement as the opening gun of the fight to be made on his national defence program when Congress convenes.

It is understood the President does not accept the Bryan statement as a declaration of war that will split the Democracy. The position taken by the President, it is stated, is that this question is by no means political. The President has explained to the leaders of his party his hope is that the plan can be so framed that the support of the majority of all parties can be secured.

The President's reply to the statements of his former Secretary of State will be contained in his annual message to Congress.

Bryan, it is learned, intends to enter the fight against the preparedness plan. He will make speeches against it, will try to line up the churches against it on the ground that the plan is "unchristian," agriculturalists on the ground that they have been slighted by Congress, will appeal to his personal followers in Congress to block passage of the bill and issue statements analyzing what he will claim are the interests behind the measures.

The President shortly will confer with Speaker Champ Clark and with Representative Mann and other minority leaders and the Senate chiefs in an effort to minimize the opposition.

THE RAJAH'S DIAMOND

An Enthralling Tale of a Soul-Corrupting Jewel and the Evil It Worked.---By Robert Louis Stevenson.

In Five Instalments.

SYNOPSIS OF PREVIOUS INSTALMENTS.

LADY VANDELEUR, wife of General Sir Thomas Vandeleur of London, who owns the Rajah's Diamond of tremendous value, sends her effeminate social secretary, Harry Hartley, on a mysterious errand with a handbag.

The General intercepts Harry, who escapes him with the aid of Charlie Pendragon, Lady Vandeleur's brother. Harry arrives at the address given him by Lady Vandeleur. A pretty maid opens the door just as Harry spies the General coming in a violent rage.

Harry takes refuge in the house. While Prudence, the maid, chats admiringly with him, the General pounds on the door. Prudence lets Harry out a rear way with a kiss.

Harry meets Charlie Pendragon, but is so flustered he flees, is pursued and climbs over a garden wall. He lands sprawling in a rose garden, with the handbag.

Rachura, a muscular gardener, takes him for a runaway thief. Just then the gardener and Harry are amazed to see that the broken handbag has spilled a wealth of jewels. Rachura carefully picks them up.

A young man in clerical garb, saluted by Rachura as "Mr. Rolles," strolls into the garden and recognizes Harry, but the latter, fearing further investigation, denies his identity. Rolles strolls on.

Rachura schemes to get half the jewels. When Harry objects in terror, Rachura twists his wrist.

Rachura takes half the jewels and kicks Harry out. Harry returns to the Vandeleurs and learns that the Rajah's Diamond is among the missing gems. He is finally exonerated, marries Prudence and emigrates.

The Reverend Simon Rolles finds the Rajah's Diamond in the rose garden, steals it, abandons his clerical life and starts out to learn how to dispose of the big jewel. He overhears the General's unscrupulous brother, Jack Vandeleur, ex-Dictator of Paraguay, telling Prince Florizel of Bohemia that he will recover the diamond or die. Rollies starts for Edinburgh to see a diamond cutter. He finds himself in the railway compartment with a solitary passenger who, to his dismay, is Jack Vandeleur.

CHAPTER X.
The Young Man in Holy Orders.

THE sleeping carriages on the Great Northern line were divided into three compartments—one at each end for travelers, and one in the centre fitted with the conveniences of a lavatory. A door running in grooves separated each of the others from the lavatory; but as there were neither bolts nor locks, the whole suite was practically common ground.

When Mr. Rolles had studied his position, he perceived himself without defence. If the dictator chose to pay him a visit in the course of the night, he could do no less than receive it; he had no means of forfeiture, and he "opened" to attack as if he had been lying in the fields. This situation caused him some agony of mind. He recalled with alarm the boastful statements of his fellow-traveler across the dining table, and the profession of immorality which he had heard him offering to the disgusted prince. Some persons, he remembered to have read, are endowed with a singular quickness of perception for the neighborhood of precious metals; through walls and even at considerable distances they are said to divine the presence of gold. Might it not be the same with diamonds? he wondered; and if so, who was more likely to enjoy this transcendental sense than the person who gloried in the appellation of the diamond hunter? From such a man he recognized that he had everything to fear, and longed eagerly for the arrival of the day.

In the meantime he neglected no precaution, concealed his diamond in the most internal pocket of a system of great-coats, and devoutly recommended himself to the care of Providence.

The train pursued its usual even and rapid course; and nearly half the journey had been accomplished before slumber began to triumph over uneasiness in the breast of Mr. Rolles. For some time he resisted its influence; but it grew upon him more and more, and a little before York he was fain to stretch himself upon one of the couches and suffer his eyes to close; and almost at the same instant consciousness deserted the young clergyman. His last thought was of his terrifying neighbor.

When he awoke it was still pitch dark, except for the flicker of the veiled lamp; and the continual rearing and oscillation testified to the unrelaxed velocity of the train. He sat up right in a panic, for he had been tormented by the most uneasy dreams; it was some seconds before he recovered his self-command; and even after he had resumed a recumbent attitude sleep continued to flee him, and to lay awake with his brain in a state of violent agitation, and his eyes fixed upon the lavatory door. He could find no clerical fault over his brow still further to shield him from the light; and he adopted the usual expedients, such as counting a thousand or banishing thought, by which experienced invalids are accustomed to woo the approach of sleep. In the old man in the end of the carriage haunted him in the most alarming shapes; and in whatever attitude he chose to lie the diamond in his pocket occasioned him a sensible physical distress. It burned, it was too large, it bruised his ribs; and there were infinitesimal fractions of a second in which he had half a mind to throw it from the window.

While he was thus lying, a strange incident took place.

The sliding door into the lavatory stirred a little, and then a little more, and was finally drawn back for the space of about twenty inches. The lamp in the lavatory was extinguished, and in the lighted aperture thus disclosed, Mr. Rolles could see the head of Mr. Vandeleur in an attitude of keen attention. He was conscious that the gaze of the dictator rested intently on his own face; and the instinct of self-preservation moved him to hold his breath, go refrain from the least movement, and keeping his eyes lowered, to watch his visitor from underneath the lashes. After about a moment, the head was withdrawn and the door of the lavatory replaced.

The Dictator Was as One Threatened.

The dictator had not come to attack, but to observe; his action was not that of a man threatening another, but that of a man who was himself threatened; if Mr. Rolles was afraid of him, it appeared that he, in his turn, was not quite easy on the score of Mr. Rolles. He had come, it would seem, to make sure that his only fellow-traveler was asleep; and, when satisfied on that point, he had at once withdrawn.

The clergyman leaped to his feet. The extreme of terror had given place to a reaction of foolhardy daring. He reflected that the rattle of the flying train concealed all other sounds, and determined, come what may, to return the visit he had just received. Throwing himself off his cloak, which might have interfered with the freedom of his action, he entered the lavatory and paused to listen. As he had expected, there was nothing to be heard above the roar of the train's progress; and laying his hand on the door at the further side, he proceeded cautiously to draw it back for about six inches. Then he stopped, and could not contain an ejaculation of surprise.

John Vandeleur wore a fur travelling cap with lappets to protect his ears; and this may have combined with the sound of the express to keep him in ignorance of what was going forward. It is certain, at least, that he did not raise his head, but continued without interruption to pursue his strange employment. Between his feet stood an open hat box; in one hand he held the sleeve of his waistcoat stretched, in the other a formidable knife, with which he had just slit up the lining of the sleeve. Mr. Rolles had read of persons carrying money in a belt; and as he had no acquaintance with any but cricket belts, he had never been quite richly to conceive how this was managed. But here was a stranger thing before his eyes; for John Vandeleur, it appeared, carried diamonds in the lining of his sleeve; and even as the young clergyman gazed, he could see one glittering brilliant drop after another into the hat box.

He stood riveted to the spot, following this unusual business with his eyes. The diamonds were, for the most part, small, and not easily distinguishable either in shape or lustre. Suddenly the dictator appeared to find a difficulty; he employed both hands and stooped over his task; but it was not until after considerable manoeuvering that he extricated a large tiara of diamonds from the lining, and held it up for some seconds examination before he placed it with the others in the hat box. The tiara was a ray of light to Mr. Rolles; he immediately recognized it for a part of the treasure stolen from Harry Hartley by the lotterer. There was no room for mistake; it was exactly as the detective had described it; there was the ruby stars, with a great emerald in the centre; there were the interlacing crescents; and there were the pear-shaped pendants, each a single stone, which gave a special value to Lady Vandeleur's tiara.

Mr. Rolles was hugely relieved. The dictator was as deeply in the affair as he was; neither could tell tales upon the other. In the first glow of happiness, the clergyman suffered a deep sigh to escape him; and as his bosom had become choked and his throat dry during his previous suspense, the sigh was followed by a cough.

Mr. Vandeleur looked up; his face contracted with the blackest and most deadly passion; his eyes opened widely, and his jaw dropped in an astonishment that was upon the brink of fury. By an instinctive movement he had covered the hat box with the coat. For half a minute the two men stared upon each other in silence. It was not a long interval, but it sufficed for Mr. Rolles; he was one of those who think swiftly on dangerous occasions; he decided on a course of action of a singularly daring nature; and, although he felt he was setting his life upon the hazard, he was the first to break silence.

"I beg your pardon," said he.

CHAPTER XI.

THE dictator shivered slightly, and when he spoke his voice was hoarse.

"What do you want here?" he asked.

"I take particular interest in diamonds," replied Mr. Rolles, with an air of self-possession. "Two connoisseurs should be acquainted. I have here a trifle of my own which may perhaps serve for an introduction."

And so saying, he quietly took the case from his pocket, showed the Rajah's Diamond to the dictator for an instant, and replaced it in security.

"It was once your brother's," he added.

John Vandeleur continued to regard him with a look of almost pitiful amazement; but he neither spoke nor moved.

"I was pleased to observe," resumed the young man, "that we have gems from the same collection."

The dictator's surprise overpowered him.

"I beg your pardon," he said; "I begin to perceive that I am growing old! I am positively not prepared for little incidents like this. But for

INVESTIGATE NEW 'KNOWLES' MYSTERY

PROVIDENCE, Nov. 6.—Sheriff Andrew J. Wilcox will attempt to solve the mystery surrounding the finding of the body of an unknown man, half buried in the Scituate woods, not far from the home of Judge Willis S. Knowles, who was slain from ambush on Labor Day, as soon as Medical Examiner Smith has made an examination of the body today.

County officials are not satisfied that the man met his death without violence and that he is not in some way connected with the murder of Judge Knowles.

The body was found by James W. O'Connor, a professional nurse, who was tramping the woods for exercise.

Medical Examiner Smith says that he cannot tell off hand how longethe body has been in the woods. "It may have been two months or it might have been six days," says the doctor. "I will be able to tell better today after I have made an examination of the remains."

Mr. Mixter is the youngest of the four sons of Mr. and Mrs. S. J. Mixter of No. 180 Marlboro street. He is one of the youngest members of the Tennis and Racquet Club.

The engagement announcement was made while Miss Williams' parents were at their summer residence "The Privilege," at Scituate. A formal tea was recently given at the Brookline home for the young couple. No date has been given out as yet for the wedding.

P. A. B. WIDENER, TRACTION MAN, DEAD

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 6.—Peter A. B. Widener, millionaire traction magnate, grandfather of Harry Elkins Widener, who lost his life on the Titanic and in whose memory the Widener Memorial Library was built at Harvard, died today at his home in Elkins Park.

Mr. Widener was born in Philadelphia, and started his career in the meat business. He soon became prominently identified with the Republican party and in 1872 was appointed city treasurer, to fill out an unexpired term.

COLLECTOR OF ART.

He was a pioneer promoter of street railways, amassing a fortune. He was vice-president of the Cresson & Clearfield Coal Company, director in the Metropolitan Street Railway Company of New York, the Philadelphia & Reading Railway Company, the United States Steel Corporation, the International Mercantile Marine, and many other companies.

He was noted as a collector of paintings and other valuable art objects. He presented to the city of Philadelphia the building for the Philadelphia Library and built and endowed the Widener Memorial School for Crippled Children at Philadelphia and at Longport, N. J.

After the death of his grandson in the Titanic disaster, and when the gift of this grandson's collection of books to Harvard was delayed because of the lack of facilities to care properly for the library, P. A. B. Widener offered $1,000,000 for a new library, to be called the Harry Elkins Widener Memorial Library. This was dedicated and formally presented to the university last June by Mrs. George D. Widener, mother of Harry Elkins Widener, whose husband was lost also on the Titanic, and who is now Mrs. Alexander Hamilton Rice.

FORTUNE FOR PAINTINGS.

It was P. A. B. Widener who bought the "Small Cowper Madonna," also known as the "Panshanger Raphael," at the record price of $700,000. He was also the possessor of the "Mill," by Rembrandt, acquired at the same time as "Apostle Peter" and "Portrait of a Man," two other noted Rembrandts. These three paintings are said to have cost him over $1,000,000.

PREFERS GIRL DEAD TO BEING EARLE'S WIFE

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—Mr. and Mrs. Paul Herman of Rutherford, N. J., the foster parents of Miss Charlotte Herman, who has become the fourth wife of Ferdinand Pinney Earle, say the statements accredited to Earle to the effect that the Hermans had been agreeable to the marriage, are false.

"I would rather see the girl dead than married to a man of that type," said Paul Herman. "We have received many letters from Earle since he and Miss Herman returned to America from England more than a year ago, and in them he urged that we become reconciled to our adopted daughter. But both Mrs. Herman and myself ignored the letters.

Malden planned to make strenuous efforts to score on Everett High in the Suburban League battle at Everett today. Malden had no idea of winning, but practice was secretly held the past week in kicking field goals and working forward passes from trick formations.

Everett was equally anxious to prevent the breaking of its nest of goose eggs. Coach O'Donnell's boys have many tidy plays in reserve to try out against Malden should necessity demand.

Everett has tried for years to get a game with Waltham, and, now that it has been accommodated with a late battle provided both teams maintain a clean slate, was out to take no chances with the Malden aggregation today.

Coach Danahy of Wellesley was hopeful that the quickness of his boys will more than make up for the weight of their opponents. Both sides had their full strength and a snappy game was expected.

Porky Flynn Beats Up Tom McMahon

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—Dan (Porky) Flynn of Boston, who bore out his nickname by tipping the beam at 202 pounds, fought one of the best battles of his career at the American Sporting Club, when he bombarded Tom McMahon with forty-two centimeter punches, rapid-fire jabs and hand-grenade hooks through ten fast rounds.

With the exception of a few brief moments in the fourth round, when McMahon, through sheer aggressiveness, rather than through any skill, managed to get in a few blows than an even break, Porky always led by a wide margin.

Had not the Illinois light heavyweight been about as tough as they come, in the matter of soaking up wallops, he would have sought the canvas long before the end of the final chapter. Flynn had a weight advantage of twenty-three pounds.

If You Want to Know About Football, Just Cast Your Eye on This

If you were to pick a man to give you the very best information about what happened in the Harvard-Princeton game, whom would you select?

WALTER CAMP, of course.

If you wanted to read the breeziest news account of the big doings at Princeton today, whom would you choose to write it?

DAMON RUNYON.

If you were seeking an accurate, lucid analysis of the game in respect to its bearing on the Yale-Harvard contest, and you knew a man who was one of the best posted and one of the closest students of the game, besides one of the clearest writers on such subjects, you would naturally look to that man. He is

DERRICK G. PARMENTER, the Harvard All-American centre.

If you were eager to see the "big" game from a Harvard point of view, whom could you select to give you that point of view better than

STANLEY PENNOCK, the Harvard All-American guard, coach of the Harvard linemen?

If you so... it the same thing from a Princeton viewpoint, who could tell you better than

"BIG BILL" EDWARDS, one of the most celebrated man in Princeton football?

And for all the details, who could give you better information than BEN AMES WILLIAMS of the Boston AMERICAN staff and FRANK G. MENKE, the football expert of the International News Service?

Well, all of these men will cover the Harvard-Princeton game exclusively for tomorrow's BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN. And the story will be LAVISHLY ILLUSTRATED.

* * * * * * *

In addition, Herman Nickerson, who wrote such a clever analysis of Harvard's play last Sunday and Princeton's play the preceding week, will give you an "inside" account of tomorrow's Yale-Brown game. The following Sunday he will tell you all you want to know about Harvard's contest against Brown. And from these two accounts you can get the best kind of an idea of how Yale and Harvard will shape up two weeks hence in their great clash at the Stadium.

* * * * * * *

At Fenway Park this afternoon, Dartmouth and Pennsylvania will play their annual classic before an immense crowd. This game will be described at length, with the best of illustration, in tomorrow's SUNDAY AMERICAN.

* * * * * * *

And complete accounts will also be given of all the other college and school football games in what will be the most thorough and brilliant football section ever printed by any newspaper.

ANN ARBOR, Mich., Nov. 6.—Michigan played its big game of the season on Ferry Field today, clashing with Cornell. Coach Yost has been grooming his Wolverine eleven particularly for the Big Red.

This was the first game since the season opened that there was not from two to half a dozen of the Michigan veterans decorating the sidelines.

Benton, who booted for Michigan today, is inferior to Barrett and Shiverick of the Ithacans. He was outplayed by the Syracuse ace artists and showed himself to have lost none of his erratic tendencies when he let loose a short, high punt under his own goal.

Michigan outweighed Cornell, man for man, by the margin of four and one-half pounds.

FITCHBURG, Nov. 6.—Fitchburg High, contenders for the championship of the Wachusett Interscholastic League, tackled Concord High of New England League Park today. The local eleven was in fine fettle and showed vast improvement over its previous form. Concord High has been somewhat erratic, but has a strong team, recently defeating its big rival, Watertown High.

Yale Crews Not in Poughkeepsie Races

NEW HAVEN, Ct., Nov. 6.—The competitions of Yale oarsmen during the present college year were examined in the rowing schedule made public this week. No entry has been made in the Poughkeepsie regatta. The year's schedule opens with the race against Columbia in New Haven Harbor, next week Friday.

The first Spring race will be with Pennsylvania at Philadelphia in April. At the American Henley on the Schuylkill, May 31, Yale will enter a second eight and freshman eight. The Blue will meet Cornell and Princeton in the triangular event on Lake Quinsigamond 27. The season will close with the regatta at New London, June 23.

Penn State 7. Lehigh 0.

STATE COLLEGE, Pa., Nov. 6.—Penn State got even for last year's defeat at the hands of Lehigh by winning the battle, 7 to 0. In the first period Higgins intercepted Hallowell's forward pass on Lehigh's ten-yard line and ran over for the only touchdown of the game. Ewing kicked goal.

MARLBORO, Nov. 6.—What may prove the deciding game in the Midland League took place at Prospect Park today when Marlboro High and Framingham High clashed. A large delegation accompanied the Framingham eleven.

Framingham is heavier than Marlboro. At the beginning of the season the outlook for Marlboro was very blue, as it had but four veterans, Laforme, Moore, Page and Lesper, but under the skillful direction of Coach George Hayes it has been whipped into fine shape.

Dr. Edward F. Regan has also accomplished wonders with Framingham and felt confident that his boys would win.

RUSH MAKES TWO PACED TITLE AT STAKE IN RACE CHANGES FOR BIG GAME TONIGHT

PRINCETON, N. J., Nov. 6.—An eleventh-hour shift—a pair of switches—was made in the Tiger lineup for the Harvard game.

Parisette, a sophomore, won his way over his two opponents, Halsey and Kauffman, for the right tackle position. Although Parisette has participated in several games this season, Halsey and Kauffman have had the choice over him, and much surprise was expressed when Head Coach "Speedy" Rush stated he would start the game.

END BROWN IS OUT.

The other change was at right end where Lamberton will take the place of Harold Brown. This change was expected, as Lamberton has been "speeded up" considerably by his experience in the backfield, and, combined with his ability in tackling and receiving forward passes, gave him the call over Brown.

The Tigers were put through a fifteen minute practice yesterday afternoon than was expected. After a signal drill on University Field, in which the team received the plays which will be used today, Rush took the squad down to Palmer Stadium.

OVATION FOR TIGERS.

Fully 1,000 students had gathered to cheer the team and practice songs they are singing today. The long parade reached the arena just before Captain Glick led his team on the field and it is doubtful whether any Princeton team has ever received the ovation given this one.

While the undergraduates sang and cheered the varsity put the final touches on its last practice before meeting the Crimson. The team ran through signals for a few minutes and Dave Tibbott kicked several field goals.

Parisette and Love booted five or six from kick-off formations, but were unable to lift the ball beyond the 20-yard line. Eddie Fritze then made some long punts to Tibbott and Shea and the practice ended.

Boston College lined up today against Fordham University in the final game for second place in the Catholic championship of the country on Alumni Field, University Heights, Newton. Several hundred Fordham undergraduates accompanied the New York team to Boston. The visitors outweighed Boston College, but the home team showed a speedier and snappier outfit.

Fordham depended mainly on its heavy line to keep the Boston College eleven from scoring and looked for points itself by consistent line-plunging. The New York team was the favorite on account of its win over Holy Cross two weeks ago, but was considerably weakened as a result of its hard game of the Thanksgiving Wednesday.

Kilroy was seen at quarter for Boston College, with Captain Jim Duffy and "Smack" Lowney at the two halfback positions and Toury at fullback. Boston College depended on Brady for its punting and Fleming for drop kicking.

Boston College had a whole bag of trick plays ready and hoped to wipe out the defeat handed out last year in New York.

HARTFORD, Nov. 6.—In the crowded Trinity stands there was an abundance of confidence that the Hartford collegians would win over Tufts today. Trinity was keyed up to championship form in preparation for its last and biggest game, with Wesleyan, two weeks away.

George Brickley was in at fullback today. Aiding Brickley behind the line were Castrator and Hunzer, with Kennedy at quarterback. Kenned will retire after today's contest in favor of Maxon. Trinity, out of deference to the wishes of Wesleyan, will observe the one-year rule, which bars Kennedy.

Tufts will attempt to use the forward pass, which proved a great ground gainer for the Brown and Blue last Saturday. Several new plays, built around the forward pass, will also be given their first trial and will be drilled upon more extensively in next week's practice in order that they may be in perfect working order when Tufts meets Bowdoin, their biggest opponent of the season, in Portland next Saturday.

Prior, whose excellent work in the pivot position in last Saturday's game prevented Tufts from being defeated, started against Trinity. "Dinger" Deane, who has been out with a bad ankle, was in at fullback.

PORTLAND, Me., Nov. 6.—Two undefeated eleven, Portland High and Waltham High, met here today in their annual battle. While it is conceded the Massachusetts team had an edge, so far as coaching was concerned, supporters of the Maine eleven banked their hopes on Portland preventing Waltham from scoring because of the splendid defence the home team has shown in its recent games. Many followers believed Captain Lappin would win for the line by the field-goal route.

Portland has one of the strongest teams in its history and has won over Bangor High, Rockland High, Hebron Academy and Thornton Academy.

The Waltham eleven came to Portland with about 800 "rooters."

Colgate Seeks Syracuse Tips

SYRACUSE N. Y., Nov. 6.—Although the Mt. Union game was on today, Frank J. O'Neill, head coach of Syracuse University, was preparing his men more particularly for the games with Colgate and Dartmouth. Because the Colgate players were in the Stadium, O'Neill did not allow his men to use many of its trick plays.

Tigers Take Cross-Country.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 6.—Princeton won the cross-country run from Pennsylvania, 24 to 31. Ralph Colton of Pennsylvania, who finished first, covered the 5¼ miles in 28m. 47s.

Harvard-Tiger Runs of Renown

The longest run ever made in a Princeton-Harvard game was a 60-yard dash. It was made by Suter of the Tigers in 1895, who obtained the ball after a fumble.

White, also a Princeton player, ran about eighty yards after a blocked kick in the game of 1911.

"Snake" Ames covered ninety yards in a brilliant zigzag dash after receiving the ball from the quarterback in the battle of 1898, and also made a 85-yard run in the same encounter after catching a punt.

Marion of Harvard, in 1882, sprinted sixty-five yards with a kicked ball, while in 1883 Jos Sears of Harvard made a sixty-yard dash on a similar play.

Runs of fifty-five yards were made by Holmes of Harvard in 1887 and Baker of Princeton in 1884. Cushing of Harvard and McNair of Princeton also ran fifty yards in the 1877 encounter.

WORCESTER, Nov. 6.—A large crowd attended the Carlisle-Holy Cross struggle here today. The Indians were represented by a speedy team and were confident they would scalp the "pale faces."

The two outfits struggled to a scoreless tie last year.

Holy Cross sent its full strength against the Redskins. Despite the fact that Carlisle ruled the betting favorite, Captain Brawley's team was determined to make the visitors travel at top speed.

The forward pass was expected to play a big part in the battle, as both teams have been playing the open style all Fall with good success.

"Bob" O'Keefe, the big guard, was out of Holy Cross' lineup because of injuries received in the Fordham game.

Captain Calac and Flood are the best Bets for the Indians, and the Holy Cross defence will find this pair a hard combination to stop.

The Carlisle squad numbered twenty-two players, together with coaches and Manager Meyer.

Fred Fulton Puts Away Terry Kellar

DULUTH, Minn., Nov. 6.—Fred Fulton, the Rochester, Minn., heavyweight, won a technical knockout in his bout with Terry Kellar of Australia, in the fourth round. Kellar was knocked down in the latter part of the third, and before the fourth round was half over had been floored twice by solid rights to the jaw. Referee Larry Scott of Milwaukee then stopped the fight. Fulton was not forced to extend himself.

Milton Academy and Country Day of Newton met today at Milton for the Greater Boston Private School championship. Early in the season Country Day defeated Nobel and Greenough, 2-0, while Milton flayed Nobel 7-0.

Country Day has made rapid strides under Coach Dave Henry. Coach Waldo Forbes of Milton has a set of fast backs that have worked together from the fourth team up. The perfect harmony with which they worked gave Country Da, a lot of trouble.

Country Day was handicapped, as both its ends and its centre are suffering from injuries received in practice this week.

HARVARD WINS CLOSE RACE AT YALE

YALE FIELD, New Haven, Ct., Nov. 6.—In the closest Yale-Harvard cross country run on record Harvard won this noon, 27 to 29.

The outcome of the hill and dale event was in doubt till the eleventh runner crossed the finish line.

Johnny Overton, the Yale team captain, took individual honors, finishing first in the record-breaking time of 26 minutes 45 seconds. He was nearly 50 yards in the lead of his team mate, "Cy" Young, when he broke the wornfed.

With this great start of closing the race, Yale looked to be an easy winner; but the Harvard fliers then flocked over the finish line in such numbers as to capture the meet. The record for the course was held by Krauss of Yale.

Overtons time was 26 minutes 45 seconds. The course record was 28 minutes 42 seconds. The present course had never before been used in intercollegiate competition.

After Young came K. E. Fuller of Harvard in 27 minutes 28 seconds, and G. A. King of Harvard was fourth in 28 minutes 12 2-5 seconds. Captain Roger Twitchell of the Harvard team was fifth in 28 minutes 34 seconds, and his team mate, W. P. Whitehouse, was sixth in 28 minutes 55 2-5 seconds.

E. A. Krauss, next to Captain Overton, the Yale team star, was seventh in the time of 29 minutes, 16 seconds, and H. S. Gulliver of Yale was eighth.

R. W. Babcock of Harvard was ninth, and H. S. Cook of Harvard tenth, although, as five of his team mates had scored, his points did not count. H. Hall of Yale was eleventh, this place giving Yale its final points.

The course lay from Yale field through wooded country at Edgewood and over West Rock back to the Yale Bowl.

The points scored were as follows:

Harvard, third, fourth, fifth, sixth and ninth, total 27.

Yale, first, second, seventh, eighth, eleventh, total 29.

Maine Takes Cross-Country.

Officials—Referee—Merriman, Geneva. Umpire—Bezdek, Pittsburgh. Head linesman—C. J. Mackey, Germantown.

PITTSBURGH, Nov. 6.—Pittsburgh and Washington & Jefferson lined up today in the big game of the year in western Pennsylvania.

Coach Glenn Warner has been trying to overcome Pitt's weakness in breaking up the forward pass, which Allegheny College gave a foretaste of last Saturday, when they gave an exact counterpart of W. & J.'s clever open work and by which they hope to beat Pitt.

Folwell has trained his men to withstand the terrible rushing tactics of Peck, Hastings, Fry and Ira Hart, and also drilled his end men to keep a watchful eye on Captain Williamson, who is likely to come across with a brilliant end run at any time.

There are two trophies besides the honor of winning at stake this year. The John M. Roberts silver cup, which was given two years ago to become the property of the team winning it three years in succession, will go to W. & J. if it wins today, as it won yesterday last year and the year before.

To add to that is the Charles S. Wise memorial trophy, given by Attorney William F. Wise in memory of his brother Charles, a graduate of W. & J., and it will also become the property of the team winning it five years in succession.

GOTHAM BOXING

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—The Fairbanks A. C. will stage three fists tonight. "Buck" Crouse, the Pittsburgh middleweight, meets "Soldier" Shaw in the feature number, while Johnny Gisee of New Orleans and Frankie Daly of Staten Island clash in the semi-final. "Pinkey" Burns of the East Side and Johnny Russell will be the principals in the third scrap.

"SOLDIER" BARTFIELD and Dave Kurtz of Newark clash in their return match at the Broadway Sporting Club tonight.

LEACH CROSS, who was to have met Gene Moriarity in one of the two star ten-rounders at the Clermont Avenue 14th Monday night, was forced to cancel on account of a bad eye. The management has secured Benny Leonard to take Cross' place, and Johnny Ertle and Abe Friedman will be the principals in the star bout.

A. L. RUDOLPH, father of Al McCoy, the middleweight king, sends the following missive: "I have taken over the management of my son, Al McCoy, world's middleweight champion. John P. Dunn, for whom he has the highest regards, has no more connections with the boy's interests.

MATT WELLS will be a busy young man within the next four weeks. He is matched to meet Joe Hiret at the Olympia A. A. in Philadelphia, Thanksgiving Day afternoon; November 19 with Young Brown at the Harlem Sporting Club; also a probable match with Johnny Griffiths at Akron, O., November 29.

Harvard Wins Freshman Run Against Yale

NEW HAVEN, Ct., Nov. 6.—Harvard's freshman cross country run team today won its annual race from their Eli 1919 rivals. Harvard distance fliers took all the first four places and the total of 17 points by the Harvard men, while Yale could register a total of only as low as 46 indicates the ease of the Harvard victory.

Dana Hutchinson, the Harvard freshman captain, romped home an individual winner by more than 42 seconds over his teammate and closest rival Kelton.

Hutchinson is a Bostonian and received his preparatory school instruction at Milton Academy. His time was 20 minutes and 4-5 seconds over the 2¾-mile hill and dale distance.

Kelton Harvard was second in 21 minutes 42 seconds. Small of Harvard, who was third, Green of Harvard who was fourth, were closely bunched. Tritch of Yale was fifth.

Hinchman Favored to Direct Pirates

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 6.—"Bill" Hinchman, a product of the lots of Philadelphia and a teammate of "Wild Bill" Donovan, the Yankee skipper, when both were playing pro ball, is said to have the call for the position of manager of the Pirates.

After being in the minors and the majors, Hinchman drifted back to the American Association and finally became manager of the Columbus club. A year ago he was secured by Pittsburgh. Hinchman did such excellent work in the outfield for the Pirates that he can be considered one of the year's greatest "comebacks."

He received the injury in the first period of the Waltham game, but pluckily concealed his real condition as long as possible in order to remain in the contest.

End Sliney is still suffering from an injured eye, received while boxing. Little "Blondy" McConnell was slated for quarterback, his headwork and cagey playing making up for deficiencies in experience and weight.

St. Angelo, who has rapidly developed into one of the best punters and drop-kickers in Greater Boston, will probably be used freely on the offence.

Boston Men May Get Hanan Cup Winner

It is more than likely that Boston yachtsmen will own the fast Class P boat Josephine that Addison G. Hanan of New York won the Manhasset Bay cup with. If present plans go through, Hollis Burgess, acting in the interests of young Hanan, the latter has made two offers to Mr. Hanan for this boat, one of the fastest of her type afloat. Word is now awaited from young Hanan to clinch the bargain.

The Josephine, designed and built by young Hanan, has for several years cleaned up about everything in her class on Long Island Sound and other Boston waters. Last Summer, to end his racing season, Mr. Hanan took the boat over to Chicago and won the Manhasset Bay cup, bringing it back to the East. With young Hanan in these races were two Boston men, John G. Alden and Charles W. Mower.

If the local yachtsmen purchase the Josephine they will immediately challenge for the Manhasset Bay cup and name the Josephine as the challenging boat. This would mean that young Hanan, to defend, would have to build another boat.

Extra Car Service for Today's Battle

The Boston Elevated railway announces an extra car service for today's Dartmouth-Pennsylvania game at Fenway Park. Beginning at 11:30, cars from Dudley street will leave the North station every two or three minutes until the opening of the game, running through Tremont street and Boylston street subways.

This will provide the best route to the park from the business and shopping districts. A three and one-half minute service will be run from Dudley street beginning at noon.

Ring Results.

The Wonderful Adventures of the Sunshine Family in the Land of Make-Believe

Copyright, 1915, New England Newspaper Publishing Company

THE Sunshines are members of an ages-old family of paper dolls, who, one after another, are coming to visit every little girl and every little boy in New England whose Papa will please remember to bring home a copy of the Sunday AMERICAN. The Sunshines live in forest, field and garden. They are on intimate terms with everybody in Mother Goose. They know the birds and the flowers—to talk to. When they come to your house they will come supplied with clothing of the latest fashion, but you MUST help them to dress.

This story—of the Adventures of the Sunshine Family—is told by the Mother-Doll, Patience Sunshine. The other members of the family, in the order of their appearance with successive numbers of the Sunday AMERICAN, are: Martha Sunshine, Peter Sunshine, her brother, little Bob Sunshine, the baby, and George Washington Sunshine, the father.

By PATIENCE SUNSHINE.

Copyright, 1915, New England Newspaper Publishing Company.

VI.

TOMORROW, TRUE to my promise, I shall visit the home of every little BOY and every little GIRL in NEW ENGLAND whose Papa ALWAYS brings home the Sunday AMERICAN.

And I shall stay just as long as I am wanted.

On the following Sunday, the Sunday AMERICAN will bring my little daughter, Martha, and on Sundays after that, my brave little boy, Peter; my darling baby, Bob, and, finally, my husband, George Washington Sunshine!

We come to spread sunshine throughout New England.

We have been spending the Summer in the Land of Make Believe, "somewhere in Maine," with the birds, the beasts, the pretty flowers, and ALL the people of MOTHER GOOSE.

Usually, when Winter comes, we all go South, but THIS year, on the suggestions of Mr. Crow, as perhaps you remember, we shall spend an entire Winter in New England!

Can we TALK?

We talk only to those who UNDERSTAND us.

We talk to BABIES.

Haven't you ever seen YOUR Baby smiling?

Of COURSE you have!

THAT is when the Baby is listening to the ANGELS, or to the FAIRIES, or the FLOWERS, or the people of MOTHER GOOSE.

We talk to little boys and little girls up to the age of seven, and sometimes, when they are very good little boys or very GOOD little girls, until they are eleven or twelve.

And we can make ourselves UNDERSTOOD to Older People, like Papa and Mamma or Aunt and Uncle.

And we just LOVE to talk to Grandpa, and Grandma!

There ARE people we CANNOT talk to, and do not GET ALONG with. Mostly, they are boys who have just put on long trousers, or who have taken up Algebra or Latin, or girls who have just put their hair up, and let their skirts down. Or bachelors in their twenties, who "simply abhor" babies, and who say there'll be no babies in THEIR houses, not if THEY know it!

People who don't like BABIES don't like US, and we don't like people who don't like babies. This may as well be understood from the beginning.

Ordinarily, I could come to YOUR house, and talk to YOU, and kiss the baby, and caress Grandma, and squeeze her dear HAND, and say "God bless all here," and go away again without EVER a soul knowing of my visit except just US.

But tomorrow things will be DIFFERENT. The Sunday AMERICAN MAN has purchased the LOVELIEST clothes for me and, if you will help me to change my dresses from time to time, I promise we shall be very HAPPY together, and you will be proud to show me off to all your friends who come to the house.

"This is Mrs. Patience Sunshine," you will say to your visitors, "SHE has come to LIVE with us. NEXT Sunday her little GIRL is coming, with the Sunday AMERICAN, and then, on other Sundays, her little son, Peter, and the baby, Bob, and finally their Papa, George Washington Sunshine."

And folks will say, "Gracious! Is that so?" and "Don't I wish WE had a little boy, or a little girl, that the Sunshines could visit!"

THAT is what they will say. You just WAIT and YOU'LL see!

I believe I gave you to understand, yesterday, that I was going to bed EARLY, to have a long sleep against my departure for Boston.

Well, I THOUGHT so. I MEANT well enough. I dictated my story to good Mr. Owl, who carries a pen over his ear, and he wrote it down, roll every word just as I said it, and then he called a boy from the Pigeon Messenger Service, and away flew the messenger to Boston.

Willie Winkle had just begun his nightly tour through the Land of Make Believe. MOTHER GOOSE must have told you about Willie. DON'T you remember?

Wee Willie Winkle runs through the town,
Upstairs and downstairs in his nightgown,
Rapping at the window, crying through the lock,
"Are the children in their beds, for now it's eight o'clock?"

Well, everybody was abed, in the home of the Old Woman Who Lives in a Shoe, and I had said my prayers, and put out the lightning-bug, when there came the loudest rapping at the ladder.

I went to the flap and peeked out, and such a sight I saw as I had never before witnessed in all my life!

As the policeman will tell you, or the milkman, or anybody else who was abroad, there never HAS been SUCH a moonlight night. It was like broad day.

And there, on the green, and in the moonlight, was EVERYBODY!

The BIRDS were there,—Robin Redbreast, Bluebird, Mocking Bird, Mr. Crow, Blue Jay, and countless others.

The FLOWERS were there,—Miss Chrysanthemum, the Anemones, the Dahlias, the Gladioli, the Phloxes, and those tall dark purple beauties, the Asters.

Our good friends and kind neighbors of Dollania were there, the Jolly family, Mr. and Mrs. Gay, and the Merrys and their children.

But I haven't BEGUN to call the roll. I made out Old King Cole, and "Come on down," called His Majesty, "and bring everybody with you. We have prepared a FEAST, to celebrate your going away. And we shall have a DANCE. See! I have brought my Fiddlers Three with me."

We dressed hurriedly, the Old Woman Who Lives in a Shoe dressing all mine as well as her own, for I cannot lift a hand—(my bringing up, I suppose; Mother ALWAYS had a HOUSEFUL of SERVANTS)—and down we ran to meet them.

Simple Simon was there, and Brian O'Linn, Little Jack Horner, Peter Piper, Robinson Crusoe, Mary and Her Little Lamb, Punch and Judy, Little Tommy Tittlemouse, Little Bo Peep, the Queen of Hearts, Little Miss Muffet, Humpty Dumpty and Little Tom Tucker, All usual, dropping for his supper.

EVERYBODY was there.

And SUCH a night.

Such a FEAST, four and twenty blackbirds!

We danced until BROAD DAYLIGHT.

My dears, I am truly TIRED.

Tonight I shall rest in one of the great hotels of Boston and tomorrow forenoon will find me in YOUR house.

I hope you are HALF as happy over MY coming as I am, for MY heart is filled with delight.

This will be my last writing for the AMERICAN. You and I will be SO busy that there will be little time for writing. On Monday, however, right here on this page of the AMERICAN, my most excellent of husbands, George Washington Sunshine, will continue these tales of life and love in the wonderful Land of Make Believe.

(To be continued Monday.)

"Lost, Strayed or Stolen!"

By NELL BRINKLEY

ADVERTISEMENT: "Lost, strayed or stolen—one small boy! Has short, goldy hair that curls; blue eyes that wink; a mouth like a Cecil Bruner rose, and is VERY short and fat! Has four dimples—duplicates—in elbows and knees. Is very confiding and will come when you call him—sometimes! Goes by so many names that it is hopeless to try and identify him so. So just say, 'Here, little boy!' Maybe he is crying and lost; maybe he is laughing and making daisy-chains and strayed; maybe he is kicking and squalling and stolen! We don't know—only that he is gone. We quarreled—and he is gone. He looked very hurt and bewildered and—when we took a breath and looked around, his chair was empty! We are lost without him—our poor little Love! We cannot eat; and we sigh, and sigh again; and we cannot look at one an other without going swimming in salt water. He blames ME—and I know it is his fault that we've lost him. Please, please, if you see him bring him home to us as fast as your generous heart will let you. A big reward! And no questions asked!"—NELL BRINKLEY.

Mother and Daughter

Ella Wheeler Wilcox Places the Blame for Incompatibility

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

Copyright, 1915, Star Co.

WHAT a lovely sight is a young mother with her baby daughter! How charming are the love and tenderness expressed in the mother's face as she watches her little girl toddling about the room when she first begins to walk!

How sweet is her sympathy for every childish trouble. Then how interested and anxious she is that her daughter should enjoy the best advantages possible, and how proud she becomes when the young girl receives merit marks at school.

But as this child develops into womanhood how rarely does the mother keep the same close sympathy; the same tender understanding, the same sweet patience, in the association with her.

In the last six months no less than four cases of incompatibility between mother and daughter have been brought to my attention. One mother infarmed me that her daughter was the "greatest disappointment" of her life. "She has no tastes in common with me," she said, "and we do not view anything from the same standpoint."

Another woman assured me her daughter was a Greek puzzle to her, and she had despaired of ever understanding the girl.

Still another complained that her daughter was selfish and willful. Other cases were discussed in my presence by third parties, who bemoaned the dissension existing between mothers and daughters of their acquaintance.

Now, when a man buys a house already built we can excuse him if he finds fault with its architecture, but when he builds it himself his criticisms are reflections upon his own taste and industry.

Exactly so seem the criticisms of any mother of her own child, especially a daughter. A son is less under her influence. Yet even then the woman who makes motherhood the great science it should be overcomes and circumvents all counter influences by her own. It requires greater tact and thought and skill than to influence a daughter, who is the mother's companion so much more closely than is the son, but it can be done, even when the father's example and advice are pernicious.

THE MOTHER'S FAULT

When a woman fails to win the first place in her daughter's heart as friend, counsellor and sympathizer, it is no one's fault but her own. I make this assertion without reservation or exception. Of course, there will be a clamor of protest from "devoted mothers," but I know what the average idea of devotion on a mother's part is, and I call it by other names.

To make a slave of yourself for your child, to try to save your daughter from menial labor, to try to dress her better than other girls and to tax your strength and purse in order to give her luxuries, is not devotion. It is unwise ambition and folly on your part. It is sowing the seeds of selfishness and indolence in a receptive young mind, that has come into being through no wish of its own.

Having brought the girl into the world, it is your duty to study her as you would some plant were you a horticulturist, and to be patient, loving and gentle with her faults and sympathetic with her requirements.

It is your life work to make a noble and worthy woman of her and to lead her by the power of unfailing love and cheerfulness to be your pride and comfort and joy.

You can only do this by controlling yourself in her presence, by setting her an example of dignity and patience and all-embracing love; by eliminating all bitterness, all gloom, all carping criticism from your heart, and by bestowing upon her nine words of appreciation for every one of fault-finding.

You must win her respect before she can be asked to respect you. You must be lovable before you can expect her to give you more than the duty regard which so many children are obliged to make serve for filial affection.

You must be sweet and responsive and sympathetic before she can confide in you, and you must be tactful and marry and wise in your methods of teaching her to be industrious and unselfish and thoughtful of you and others.

The young girl who is preached to constantly derives little benefit from the maxims taught in the preachings. The girl who is scolded for her faults or follies does not regret them so much as she dislikes the scolding.

THE GREAT MISTAKE

The girl who is constantly reminded of the debt she owes her mother begins to wonder why she should be grateful for an unhappy life she did not ask for.

The girl who is reminded of her disagreeable inheritance from ancestors naturally does not feel herself responsible for her faults. Yet she is—for the divine inheritance is there, and if she is taught to cultivate that, no earthly traits can dominate or control her.

It is this truth, madam, which you should impress upon your daughter's mind from the cradle to womanhood. You should say to her: "You are God's creation, sent with your sweetness. I know you will be all that I want you to be.

"Between the love of God and your mother you cannot be other than good and true and useful, no matter what hardships may come to your lot, and remember always that a blessing you are to me, and how glad I am God let you come to me." Kind reproofs, when needed, from lips that are more given to words like these will not be lost.

The child used to love and praise feels the force of a merited reproof, while it fails dead upon the ears of one accustomed to continual fault-finding and nagging and ill-temper.

Madam, if you are a mother, ask yourself what kind of memories you are building for the daughter to whom you gave birth. It is not too late to begin and create a new impression of yourself. Simply because you are her mother cannot make her love and reverence your memory unless you are worthy of both sentiments.

If you have let your child slip too far away from you to bring her back, and if you have cultivated weeds instead of flowers in her heart, at least take the blame upon yourself and do not assume the air of a martyr before the world. You were the architect of your daughter's character—before her birth and afterward. You could have made her anything you wished her to be had love and patience been your tool.

God and a wise mother can overcome heredity and environment, and defy the devil and fate in educating a girl's heart. God always does His part by implanting the divine nature, but it is the mother's work to develop it.

In Our Wonderful World

When, in 1494, on his second voyage, Columbus discovered the island of Jamaica, it was populated by the Arawak Indians, who, although at first hostile to him, became friendly on his giving them clothing and other articles hitherto unknown to them. When, later, the Spaniards settled on the island, they forced the Indians not only to do agricultural work on their own island, but to labor in the gold mines of Haiti. So hard were the Spanish taskmasters that by 1565 the whole Arawak nation was exterminated.

During the past six years G. C. Langley of New York has been seeking to recover all possible traces of the lost race. To that end he has spent the Winter on the island in exploring the old kitchen middens, or refuse heaps, of the Arawaks, in which he has found, besides shells and pottery, and tortoise and coney bones, many coins or rude chisels, grinding stones, stone pendants and axes—fifteen hundred objects in all.

The greatest demand for human hair is for pure white hair, and as much as $800 a pound is paid for it.

The best white hair is obtained from women in the South of France, Italy and Bohemia. All the best and finest hair is European; that from China and Japan is coarse.

The average price paid to a woman for the privilege of cutting off all her hair is about $25.

A large portion of hair is bought from Sicilian women, and there is on record a case of a young Sicilian girl receiving $20,000 for her hair, which was remarkable for its rich abundance, perfect blue-black color and very graceful waviness.

Until quite recently there was a stigma attached to some of the coarse black hair from China. Unscrupulous hair merchants in Canton were, in 1910, discovered exhuming corpses and cutting off their pigtails. The Chinese government took steps to stop this traffic.

It is stated that a French army surgeon has, with the aid of an extraordinary strong electro-magnet, recently performed several successful operations without the use of an anaesthetic. A casing of ferro-nickel surrounds the German cartridges, and the electro-magnet simply draws them out of the wounded man's body, as well as splinters of shell.

WALSH BEATEN BY LIQUOR VOTE, SAYS ANTI-SALOON LEADER

Major "Dan" Morgan Smith of Chicago, the former general counsel for the National Model License League, one of the largest liquor organizations in the United States, but now a speaker for the Anti-Saloon League of America, said today in an interview:

"I resigned as counsel for the Model Liquor forces because I found the liquor people unwilling to accept legislation looking to the taking of the liquor business out of politics and the lawbreaker out of the liquor business.

"I joined the Anti-Saloon League because I believed that I had found a means to make prohibition prohibit, and because I recognized the necessity of eliminating the liquor business from the control of the various political parties responsible for undesirable legislation and the defeat of needed legislation, not alone in large governmental affairs but in State and municipal politics.

"The recent pledging of the candidate for Mayor of Chicago by the liquor forces to the violation of his oath of office, and their unmitigated gall in publishing such pledges, demonstrates more clearly than ever the necessity of eliminating the liquor business from the control, or their detriment, all public officials, but that they are so shameless in their political iniquity that they dare proclaim their own infamy

LIQUOR MEN BEAT WALSH.

"This exposé in Chicago raises the question how many public officials have been required to sign pledges that they will protect the liquor interests even though they require the breaking of their oaths of office.

"The recent defeat of Governor Walsh and the Democratic ticket indicates clearly that the liquor interests are not willing to accept a public official even though he be favorable to their interests unless they can own him body and soul.

"When Governor Walsh indicated that he would sign the liquor transportation bill if it were amended to meet certain objections, he signed his own warrant for defeat, for the Democratic, Republican, Socialist and all other kinds of liquor people take their orders from the liquor headquarters, and the order ougnetaboshly went out defeat Walsh.

"Governor Walsh refused to be owned. I do not mean to insinuate that the liquor interests found Mr. McCall more pliable or that he gave pledges to those interests, but it is certain that the liquor interests favored Mr. McCall's election. Perhaps they preferred to "fly in with they knew not of, etc." If Mr. McCall does not disappoint these people he will find that Mr. Walsh's vote will be the balance of power in the next election by which legislation for the state must have demonstrated to the political leaders of all parties that the temperate forces of the State will no longer submit to a party which, under the cloak of Democracy, for temperance, defeats all temperance measures in the secrecy of the committee room or by the lobbying with the unscrupulous amendments, or by the old trick of counting noes and voting for such measures only when they are assured that enough others will vote against them to defeat them.

"The object of Shaw's race was to drive the anti-Democrats and the anti-Republicans apart so that they may no longer cast the same votes under the same orders from the same resources.

"Hereafter the politics of party power will be held responsible for the vote of committees on liquor legislation. No matter what the personnel of the committee may be, nor what combination of individuals of all parties may be formed to defeat temperance legislation in committees, the party in power will not be held guiltless. The party in power is responsible for the make-up of committees and will be so held by the temperance forces.

SALOON-METHODS USED.

"The defeat of Walsh was no accident. It was carefully planned by the generals of the liquor forces. For once the brewers, distillers and wholesalers were in accord. As for the saloon-keeper, he was as usual the goat. He was forced to go out in his precinct and use saloon methods in making the Democrats vote a Republican ticket.

"Those higher up in the liquor business were New England rum. They used methods that were still more refined. They clothed the vanity of some and the greed of others. They have never hesitated to threaten small and big fry politicians with elimination from the political world if they did not do their bidding.

"The loud-mouthed fake bettor, the calamity-howler, the religious fanatic the anti-Sunday-baseball and the anti-old-party" man and the waver of the balance have been enlisted into action to defeat Mr. Walsh.

"Regardless of his past splendid record, of his clean personality, of his brilliant attainments, he was defeated in order that the Judge Transportation Bill might stand a chance of veto when the next Legislature passed it.

"And most important of all, in order that the Republican party might not declare for prohibition in order as the Republican leaders threatened they would do, if they were elected.

"The Massachusetts brewer cares not for politics, nor for the country. He is like the British brewer, who drowns out the sounds of sobs of soldiers' families in the Belgium relief in with 'the cry of 'Beer, beer, beer' when the cures of Manchuster recover from the effect of false issues, roar-backs and threats of liquor interests. They were elected that this valuable public servant should not be lost to the country.

"Maybe Governor Walsh steps from the Commonwealth Mansion to the Judge's chamber in Washington. The record, his personality and his ability commend him to all those thinking people who do not desire a whiskey-owned public official."

TODAY'S STOCK MARKET

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor

Stocks were weak today in New York, where prices were irregular at the start, and more generally lower. The opening coppers were the strongest group, but they suffered in the general recessional movement. It was a professional market. The public did not participate to any extent. As is usual at the end of the week there was a disposition to close out commitments and take whatever profit there was in sight. Trading was of less volume than has been the average of a morning of late. Railroads eased off with other classes.

War industrials declined the most but the price movement for them and the list in general was comparatively narrow. Among the weakest issues at the close were: American Woolen, Lackawanna Steel, Maxwell, Willys-Overland, Goodrich, U. S. Rubber, Tennessee Copper, Canadian Pacific and Reading. Their losses ranged from one to five points. Transactions totalled 477,100 shares for the morning and 4,538,200 for the five-day week. There was a large business this week in bonds in New York, it totalling $29,249,000.

BEARS MADE A RAID.

During the early trade at the end of the first half hour stop orders were reached in a number of cases, but the list as a whole acted well under professional buying. The undertone of trade is still bullish, but that large interests are awaiting a reaction before rendering further support. The weakness of war stocks has dampened the speculative ardor for them. Trade is in a cautious mood. Many speculators expect a shake-out on reactions.

Missouri Pacific was strong among rails and General Motors and General Electric among miscellaneous. U. S. Steel ranged between 85⅜ and 86⅝, closing at 85⅞, a trifle below yesterday's final price. It was the most dealt in today. Anaconda was active and closed unchanged.

COPPERS IRREGULAR HERE.

Most of the trading in Boston was in coppers and they had a good tone at the start. Some active ones showed early gains. There was profit taking and they closed irregular, with the majority lower. Advances included Arizona Commercial, Shattuck-Arizona ¼, Shannon ¼, Quincy ¼, and Copper Range 1. American Zinc, Lead and Smelting closed unchanged. Boston & Maine declined 1 and New Haven ¼. United Fruit was up 1 and Atlantic Gulf common 3. Gulf issues were the most active in Boston this week. In four days transactions in them totalled more than 71,000 shares.

COPPER METAL IN DEMAND.

According to one New York statement, the St. Paul road has bought around 16,000,000 pounds of electrolytic copper and recent British government purchases amount to about 5,000,000. Domestic buying in salt to the tune of fair volume. In producing circles there is optimism as to business prospects. Lead has an upward tendency and the spelter outlook is favorable.

NEW YORK BANK STATEMENT.

The New York bank statement as to the actual condition of clearing house members gives surplus reserve as $139,109,590, a decrease of $7,114,470 for the week. In addition to the average condition figures, their surplus reserve totals $191,492,840, a decrease of $7,599,000.

OUR FIRST DUTY IS TO MAINTAIN PEACE; OUR NEXT DUTY IS TO PREPARE FOR WAR

Shall We Allow Ourselves to Be Lulled Into False Security?

COMMISSIONER YAWAKAMA is a Japanese of high rank who adds to his official duties the task of persuading Americans that it would be a sinful waste of money to spend it in preparing naval and military defences against a future Japanese attack.

Commissioner Yawakama talks almost as soothingly as Dr. Jordan or Professor Shaler. In fact, he almost rises to the plane of Dr. Gulick, the most eminent pacifist now out of captivity.

If we are to believe Mr. Yawakama, war between Japan and the United States is impossible. It is unthinkable—as Haldane remarked two years ago of war between England and Germany.

According to Commissioner Yawakama, Japan overflows with gratitude and love toward America. From America Japan derived her impetus. To America she owes her civilization. Nothing that jingoes can say or do will ever cause Japanese loyal gratitude to turn to hate. Nor has Japan any ambitions which could possibly bring her into collision with America.

Naturally, the conclusion is that there could be no more foolish waste of money than in building warships and fortifications to guard against an impossible and unthinkable assault made by loving Japan upon her dear friends in America.

It is interesting to compare the attitude of Japan generally and the childish trustfulness of this country with the situation that existed in England previous to the present war.

Books appeared in Germany—Bernhardi's and others—which spoke of Germany's plans for extension and aggression and world power. The English had their attention called to these publications, but there were always German assurances that these books did not represent the true temper of the people.

Germany committed a number of menacing and aggressive acts, but those acts were minimized.

Germany built up her navy, stored munitions, did everything that Japan is now doing, with the same danger to England that Japan's actions offer the United States, but England was always soothed into somnolence and indifference.

An enlightening play, "An Englishman's Home," was produced at the theatre. It portrayed the invasion of England by Germany, but the play was characterized as sensational and unreasonable.

The newspapers which warned England were regarded as jingoes, the statesmen who endeavored to arouse England were considered as demagogues, and so poor, stupid England stumbled along without preparing for war until the war was upon her.

Is the United States going to be just as silly as England?

Is it going to be indifferent to Japan's preparations, unmindful of Japan's acts of aggression, neglectful of all the evidences of Japan's hostility and of Japan's boundless ambition?

Is it going to be lulled into a false sense of security by expressions of Japanese statesmen and commissioners whose business it is to prevent the United States from realizing the objects of Japan until it is too late?

Are the American people going to call patriotic newspapers jingoes and condemn them for giving news and warnings in regard to the inevitable conflict with Japan?

If so, America will be not merely as stupid as England; it will be more stupid than England, because it will be neglectful even in the face of England's bitter experience—indifferent even with the evidence of the consequences of neglect and indifference before it.

The United States must be prepared to compel peace. Then, if Japan's friendship is genuine, we can reciprocate her friendship; while if she is hostile or aggressive we can repel her attack.

As a matter of plain fact, those who desire friendship with Japan should realize that nothing will so stimulate friendship on the part of Japan as thorough preparedness on the part of this country.

Once-Overs

The mother who objects to a neighbor correcting her child when the little one is doing wrong is building a monument of trouble for herself.

The mother's objection has a tendency to make the child bold and disrespectful, and leads to a question in the child's mind, for, he argues, if grown-up people differ so much in opinion, one or the other must be wrong, and perhaps both are far from right.

The child is not so likely to comprehend the attitude of the mother, and is more than likely to feel that his misdeeds have the approval of his parents.

Then if the parents have an argument on the subject, he soon comes to believe that his way is as good as any, and even better than that of father or mother, for he at least knows what he wants to do, and "dad" and "mom" cannot agree.

When you have tried to impress a truth and the child persists in wrongdoing till a neighbor observes and objects, any parent should feel thankful to the person who helps to hold up his hands by a voiced correction, as there is double the chance of breaking up the bad habit when the child realizes that others think as they do at home.

The Health of Our School Children

By Woods Hutchinson, A. M., M. D.

THE habit or institution of taking stock at annual or semi-annual intervals, finding out just where we stand and whether the balance is in our favor or against us, is one of the first fundamentals of good business policy. For the farmer a rough approximation to stock-taking comes automatically every Fall when he counts the bushels of grain in his granaries, the tons of hay in his stacks and the number of cattle and hogs which can be made fat enough for market before Christmas.

But it is only just recently and then only in a half-hearted, half-frightened way that we have ventured to apply these rational and helpful methods to our most valuable and important crop, the leading staple in every country in the world, which never fails and seldom fluctuates more than a fraction of a per cent. from year to year—the bumper crop of children which we garner into our schoolhouses every Fall.

Until recently the State was content to take these annual armies of children just as they came and pretty much for granted. It thought it had done its full duty, indeed most commendably well, by them when it had provided a seat on a bench in a more or less warmed and less or more ventilated room, with a place in a class, a slate and a few books. A child was a child just exactly like all other children; if he wasn't, he must be made so by formal molds and rigid discipline, and if he didn't happen to fit the mold or profit by the discipline, so much the worse for him.

Gradually, however, it dawned upon school authorities—through the protests of intelligent, clear-eyed teachers, a few meddlesome doctors and nurses, and eccentric and presumptuous parents, who dared to blaspheme the sacred curriculum and butt into the cloistered shades where programs and standards are created—that one child really did differ from another of the same annual crop, both in natural ability and aptitudes and in the degree to which his natural powers were handicapped or crippled by disease, by poor eyesight, by deafness, by malnutrition, and by physical defects.

Of course, we can somewhat reassure ourselves by remembering that only a comparatively small proportion of these are grave, or serious defects such as would shorten life or undermine the constitution. Well on toward half the number, for instance, consist of decayed, missing or malformed teeth; a fifth or a sixth would be adenoids, and an almost equal number defects of eyesight requiring fitting of glasses.

It would be a modest and moderate claim that the health and efficiency of our school children and their vigor and usefulness in future life could be increased at least twenty-five, if not thirty-five per cent. by prompt and intelligent attention to these curable defects. Cleaning, filling and straightening teeth, removing adenoids and relief of catarrh, with consequent cure of deafness, fitting the peering and dazzled eyes of the short-sighted and the astigmatic with proper glasses which really let them see the sun and the stars and look the world squarely in the face, filling the aching voids in empty stomachs with warm lunches—these are among the most important educational features of the schools and nothing ought to be allowed to interfere with their thorough and intelligent carrying out.

More Truth Than Poetry

By James J. Montague

How Tempus Does Fugit!

WHERE is little Toddlekins, who used to sit and crow
Or bend his head down solemnly and try to bite his toe?
Whose funny little shell-pink nose would pucker up in fear
When all the neighbor ladies cried: "Oh, isn't he a dear!"
You haven't seen him lately, hey? Well, well. The young galoot
Went to a dansant last night in father's evening suit.

WHERE is little Curleyhead, to whom a brief while back
You fed at stated intervals ten drops of ipecac?
It seems about a week ago you used to fairly quake
While running for the doctor when he got the stomachache.
You see that husky copper shouting: "Hi! You! Go ahead!"
Out yonder on the avenue? Well, that is Curleyhead.

WHERE is little Dimplechin, who used to take delight
In sleeping all the live-long day and staying up all night?
Remember how she sat up straight with happy little coos?
You hardly have made up the sleep she used to make you lose.
You haven't seen her recently? Heigh, oh! The years have flown!
SHE'S got a little Dimplechin that's all her very own.

Where Are the Efficiency Experts?

Bulgaria is extremely wasteful of ammunition in shooting ten of her own officers. If she'd only sent them to the front most any of the allies would have been glad to do the job for her—and at their own expense.

Advice to Young Bachelors

It Being Highly Desirable to Win a Place in the Affections of the Young Brother or Younger Sister of a Certain Party, Why Not Enlist the Support of Mistress Patience Sunshine? Take Patience With You, on Your Sunday Call.

Mistress Patience Sunshine, mother of Martha, Peter and Baby Bob Sunshine, and wife of George Washington Sunshine, accompanies the Sunday AMERICAN tomorrow into every home in New England where Papa is thoughtful, kindly, considerate and loving.

And, as EVERYBODY knows, ALL the Papas of New England are thoughtful, kindly, considerate and loving.

Patience, Martha, Peter, Baby Bob and George Washington Sunshine are paper doll cut-outs, of a new and marvellous description.

The Sunshine paper doll cut-outs were designed by a celebrated artist, Marjorie Torre Bevans, famous as the designer of chic clothes.

The Sunshine paper doll cut-outs are made with both front and back views, and with tags that are part of the dolls' clothing and made to "stay put."

These dolls are not printed on "news" paper. They are not parts of a printed page, but, instead, will make their appearance upon separate sheets of a very fine paper, folded into copies of the Sunday AMERICAN.

"It was my aim," Mrs. Bevans tells us, "to design new and beautiful paper dolls such as no one had ever seen before, with pretty, smart and fashionable clothes and toys, and everything the heart of a paper doll could wish for, and to send these wonderful new dolls broadcast, so that every child in the country could have them."

The Sunday AMERICAN will make no extra charge for the Sunshine dolls. They are absolutely free to every little boy and every little girl in New England whose Papa remembers to bring home the Sunday AMERICAN. And the dolls will appear with the Sunday AMERICAN in the following order:

Patience Sunshine, with tomorrow's Sunday AMERICAN.

Martha Sunshine, with the Sunday AMERICAN of November 14.

Peter Sunshine, with the Sunday AMERICAN of November 21.

Baby Bob Sunshine, with the Sunday AMERICAN of November 28.

George Washington Sunshine, with the Sunday AMERICAN of December 5.

This is the program so far as it has been completed. Whether more paper doll cut-outs will follow the members of the Sunshine family rests entirely and absolutely with our friends, the children.

The children may want to know who these Sunshine folks are, and where they come from, and all about them. The daily evening editions of the AMERICAN are making these things clear.

In the DAILY AMERICAN is being printed an account of the Wonderful Adventures of the Sunshine Family in the Land of Make-Believe. The Sunshines, it appears, are on intimate terms with everybody in Mother Goose, with all the people of Fairyland, with our good old friend Santa Claus, and with the birds and the beasts. They are really wonderful people, these Sunshine folk, and if any little friend of yours desires to know all about them we would respectfully suggest that you provide that little friend with the history of the Sunshine family as it is being told every evening in the AMERICAN.

A beautiful young woman of twenty or thereabouts—painted by Mr. Harrison Fisher—looks up at us from the front cover and reminds us that, with the first Sunday of the month, the AMERICAN Sunday Monthly Magazine is at hand.

Like the Sunshine paper doll cut-outs, the AMERICAN Sunday Monthly Magazine goes to every purchaser of the Sunday AMERICAN WITHOUT EXTRA CHARGE. Among the November contributors are Virginia Terhune Van de Water, Arthur B. Reeve, Guglielmo Ferrero and Edward Mott Wooley.

Concerning the Sunday AMERICAN proper—the regular or usual news, magazine-section and feature pages of New England's greatest Sunday newspaper—we may say that tomorrow's number will be, in every respect, well up to the high standard of excellence which, as our readers are aware, has been SUCCESSFULLY maintained for not only many months, but many years.

The Sunday AMERICAN will continue to print the latest important news of Boston, New England, the United States, and the world at large, down to the very minute of going to press.

Especially noteworthy features of tomorrow's Sunday AMERICAN will be an interview with Mr. Samuel Merwin, the celebrated young American author, by Mr. Julian Hawthorne. Mr. Merwin is a new resident of old Concord, Massachusetts.

Another special article of note is Mr. C. O'Connell Galvin's interview with Mr. Francis Neilson, a member of the British Parliament now visiting in Boston. Mr. Neilson says the end of the War will be in sight WITHIN SIX MONTHS.

How the liquor interests of Boston once meddled mediesomely in politics, and how, in consequence, Boston was almost placed within the "No License" column, is the subject of another timely Sunday AMERICAN article.

The Harvard game at Princeton, the football battle of Brown with Yale, and the Pennsylvania-Dartmouth engagement in Fenway Park, will be reported in the Sunday AMERICAN by EXPERTS and illustrated by the BEST of newspaper photographers.

For these, and other reasons, we look for an unusual demand for the Sunday AMERICAN and we would respectfully suggest to our friends the advisability of saying an early word to their regular newsdealers.
